Grant vs. Gift

Lamar

RESEARCH AND SPONSORED PROJECTS

The following conditions characterize a research/sponsored project agreement, and help to distinguish such agreements from gifts. Any analysis of these conditions must also take the intent of the donor/sponsor into consideration.

1. Specific statement of work

Sponsored and/or research support projects are typically awarded to Lamar University to accomplish a specific statement of work and commitment to a specified project plan. It may be in response to a submitted proposal, concept paper, etc. While gifts may be restricted to a general purpose, e.g., construction of a building, or library support, a sponsored project will usually entail a more detailed project methodology, e.g., a series of experiments to test a particular hypothesis, or support to perform a particular activity. This statement of work is typically supported by a project schedule, activity approval from the University compliance committee (IRB, COI, Patent, etc.) and a line-item budget, both of which are key to financial accountability, described below.

2. Detailed financial accountability

The written agreement typically includes detailed and complex financial ac

- b. The award is irrevocable, with no specified "period of performance."
- c. There is no formal fiscal accountability.
- d. The contribution can support research, but the donor or associated University staff must not derive commercial or private benefits from research, have rights to intellectual property that may result or have first rights to any research outcomes.
- e. There is no commitment of direct project personnel effort to accomplish the research.
- e. Funds are designated for scholarly endeavors.
- f. The contribution is not federal or state money.

CHECKLIST

For your convenience, a checklist to determine whether your project involves a grant or a gift may be found here.

PROCESSING CORPORATE, FOUNDATION AND NONPROFIT CONTRACTS

Support from a corporation or foundation that is not a voluntary donation for religious, charitable, educational, or literary purposes may actually be a contract. Contracts are defined as "exchange transactions having potential commercial benefit or profit that does not support a charitable purpose. This category of support is most applicable to corporate or private research contracts. All contracts, MOU's, research agreements, cooperative agreements, testing agreements, service agreements, etc. involving research or sponsored program activity is processed through ORSPA. ORSPA has the legal responsibility for the review and submission of all preliminary and final submissions of external research and sponsored program requests to ensure financial and regulatory compliance, applicable human subject protections, current Financial Conflict of Interest guidelines, consistent time and effort collection, documentation available for internal and external audit, etc. In addition, coordinated research reporting increases Lamar University's State of Texas allocations specific to research.